Or You can setup your own hot keys to convert your html, xhtml, css, htaccess, etc files into HLP. Scripting News - Bob Veber 07-10-2008, 12:15 AM Did you see this new tool that does the same thing? Or, the other way around... Cheers! Clive 07-10-2008, 01:53 AM Did you see this new tool that does the same thing? Or, the other way around... Yes, I'm aware of it. But I liked the way you wrote about RTF2HLP, made it sound more in-depth than it is. I was thinking you might be the author of the one I downloaded from MS, but your username is different. Anyway, I haven't used RTF2HLP yet because it's so short and easy. Cheers

RTF files can be added in the working environment using the drag-and-drop support or built-in browse button. Conversion settings RTF2HLP gives you the possibility to make use of preset hotkeys for faster actions, reconvert the last RTF document, as well as access a list with recently processed RTF items. The application does not offer support for a preview mode of the source and converted files. It only reveals a log in the main window which shows information about the processed files and possible errors. What's more, the utility comes with support for popup help manuals, automatically generates the content files, and lets you process tables with borders, change the background color, as well as work with floating graphics items. Tests have shown that RTF2HLP carries out conversion tasks quickly. It is not a resource hog so you do not have to worry that it hampers the overall performance of your computer. Final remarks All things considered, RTF2HLP comes packed with several handy features for helping you create HLP files out of RTF documents, and can be configured by rookies and professionals alike.
