Key Exchanger: Is Your Home Network Really Secure?. A New Generation of Portable Seismic Sensors.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to small size, corrosive resistant containers, and more particularly, to a fused aluminum container used to store and ship corrosive fluids and sold under the trade mark "Xylon." 2. Description of the Related Art Containers fabricated from aluminum alloys are used for a variety of purposes. Such containers are particularly useful for storing and shipping corrosive fluids, particularly acids and alkalies, in view of their light weight, superior corrosion resistance, and general ease of fabrication. Additionally, conventional aluminum containers are generally relatively easy to clean. Aluminum containers typically comprise a series of one or more aluminum alloy bodies which are welded together. Alternatively, aluminum containers may comprise a series of aluminum alloy bodies which are welded together and then coated with a polymeric material. The material of the welded and coated aluminum alloy containers is preferably formed of an AA 3690 or AA 5182 aluminum alloy composition. As used herein, the term "AA" is to be understood to mean that the specific aluminum alloy composition designated by that term is a standard aluminum alloy known in the art. Further, as used herein, the term
