Players can be naturally shifted left and right with the left analog stick, and moved up and down with the right analog stick. They can also throw the ball in any direction by pressing the analog stick. Rotation during dribbling is handled with the right analog stick, while the left analog stick is used to jump with any body part. Finally, the D-pad is used to quickly cycle through the natural player animations, but can be used to quickly react to what the player sees on the pitch. In addition, FIFA 22 uses "Immersive Touch," an innovative control method that allows players to "Touch" the pitch with their controller to use in-game tools. When players tackle an opponent, they can use their controller to move the player to different positions on the pitch, similar to how some pause system control methods allow players to defend a free kick. Players are also able to move players on the pitch with the right analog stick or by tapping, dragging, and lifting the controller. Players can move a player with their right thumb, and follow up with the right stick to pick up the ball and play it. Finally, players can touch the pitch with the right analog stick, change on-pitch and off-pitch settings, and then press the right analog stick to begin play. "Immersive Touch" has been balanced for a wide range of skill levels, and all players can be controlled easily with only a simple gamepad. Players can also fine-tune their controls and setup options in-game by leaning into the right analog stick. Players can also use pre-match and post-match camera angles to help them adjust to the new controls. "Focus on Performance" FIFA 22 introduces a new "Calibrated Performance" feature. Players can use the new feature to calibrate individual player ratings to up to five new versions of their default rating, and to fine-tune the visual appearance of the pitch. Pitches can also be adjusted in real-time depending on how well players are playing on the pitch. During gameplay, players can take advantage of "Unlock Meter" to fine-tune a number of on-pitch and off-pitch settings. New team setup styles are also available in FIFA 22. Players can setup their team in one of six new team settings, including a 3-5-2 formation. Team lineups are arranged by formation
